Skydive Everest

You'll jump from a perfectly good airplane (one designed for high-altitude flight) and land on a perfectly good mountain in front of Everest. The Drop Zone for our Everest Skydiving Adventure was chosen with care. At 12,350 ft, it's the highest Drop Zone on the planet and it will exist only while we're there. Great care is being taken to have minimal impact on the environment. (Landing on Everest at Everest Base Camp isn't an option due to the dangerously rocky terrain.)

Our jump dates in Nepal are designed to cheat the 200 mph jet stream that roars across Everest's summit. 2011 jumps will be made in October. For exact departure dates, give us a call at 941-346-2603.

Gear, Etc

All necessary skydiving equipment will be provided for you. Jumping at such altitudes requires special parachute equipment which has been manufactured from very durable materials. We'll also provide you with a skydiving oxygen system that has been well proven at high altitude and is unobtrusive and non-restrictive. It's really cold on Everest, so we'll provide you with a thermal head cover in addition to head protection and protective goggles.

Each jumper or tandem team will also have a small personal survival kit, compass, firefly strobe, and two-way mini-radio in case of landing off the Drop Zone. Our expert team will make sure you're fully familiarized with all the jump and safety equipment.

Experienced, licensed skydivers will make their own test jumps so as to satisfy the Everest Skydive team— and themselves— that they are ready to make the ultimate High Altitude Skydive.

We'll be using a Turbine Pilatus Porter for our high-altitude jumps. At the Drop Zone, we'll use an Equirrel B3 helicopter and local yaks to get around.
